Introduction

The Scott County, Indiana, outbreak of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) and hepatitis C virus (HCV) is the single largest known outbreak among persons who inject drugs (PWID) in the United States. As of February 2017, 215 HIV cases had been reported to the Indiana State Department of Health (ISDH) in Scott County. Of these, 204 (95%) reported injection drug use and 204 (95%) were co-infected with HCV. Substantial increases in the rate of chronic HCV infection have also been noted in Scott County (316 to 1,001 cases per 100,000 population from 2014 to 2015), although the full contribution of injection drugs is unknown due to the magnitude of cases and fact that not all could be prioritized for investigation. The response to the outbreak has been as large and complex as the outbreak itself, being among persons who reported injecting oxycodone (Opana®) and sharing needles, and involving numerous federal, state, and local agencies and partners.

This document and supporting interactive statistics, available through the state website at <http://in.gov/isdh/26680.htm>, are offered as a resource to help inform prevention and response efforts planned or under way.

What Local Health Departments Can Do

Local public health staff are critical to the identification of outbreaks. Important activities to implement, maintain or enhance:

- Promptly report new HIV cases to the ISDH Division of HIV/STD/Viral Hepatitis
- Promptly report new HCV cases to the ISDH Epidemiology Resource Center
- Look for possible clusters of HIV and/or HCV: case numbers above the baseline rate, disproportionately more cases in a specific demographic group, or common risk factors
- Become familiar with local data on injection drug use and related infections to identify clusters
- Request access to the ESSENCE system to monitor emergency department chief complaints due to drug overdose
- Consider enhanced testing for HIV and HCV, especially in jails, prisons, drug treatment centers, and emergency departments

More information on steps local health departments and health care providers can take is found in the CDC Health Advisory at <https://emergency.cdc.gov/han/han00377.asp>.

Explanation of Charts and Maps in This Profile

Line Chart

- ① A solid blue line (anchored by circles) indicates annual county rate over time. Circles and lines are omitted if year is suppressed.
- ② A thin dashed line indicates trend of county (blue) or state (red). Trends are omitted if one or more years are suppressed.
- ③ A dotted red line (anchored by triangles) indicates annual state rate or count over time.

Bar Chart

- ④ A gray bar indicates an unstable county rate, based on less than 20 cases or events, for the variable of interest.
- ⑤ A blue bar indicates a stable county rate for the variable of interest.
- ⑥ The vertical error line indicates the 95% confidence area of the county rate for the variable of interest.
- ⑦ A horizontal dashed red line indicates the state rate for the variable of interest. Error lines which overlap the state rate indicate statistical similarity.

Mapping

- ⑧ Counties of similar rates are grouped into 1 of 5 classes. Classification is based on standard deviations from the mean rate of all counties.
- ⑨ Dark blue indicates highest county rates. Light blue indicates lowest county rate.
- ⑩ Counties depicted by a gray screen pattern indicate the data for the county have been suppressed.

Data Methodology

Data were acquired from several Indiana State Department of Health divisions. If the number of cases in a county was less than five, case counts and corresponding rates were suppressed to protect patient privacy and were reported as zero. Rates in this report represent cases per one hundred thousand persons by county and were calculated by dividing the case count by the county population estimate (U.S. Census Bureau) for the corresponding year(s). Rates calculated from counts less than 20 were considered unstable and are indicated by a grey bar in the bar charts and a "U" in the maps. Time series charts illustrate change in a variable over a period of time. Linear trend lines were added to the time series chart to indicate an increasing or decreasing trend. Trend lines were calculated on the suppressed datasets by identifying the slope ( $\alpha$ ) and y-intercept ( $\beta$ ) of each dataset.

$$\text{trend line} = \alpha x + \beta \qquad \text{slope} = \frac{n \sum(xy) - \sum x \sum y}{n \sum x^2 - (\sum x)^2} \qquad y - \text{intercept} = \frac{\sum y - \alpha \sum x}{n}$$

Mapped data classified using a Natural Breaks method. This method groups data together by placing class breaks at the low points within the histogram.

Statewide Indiana Maps and Charts

Non-fatal Emergency Department Visits due to Opioid Overdoses

Opioid overdoses that present to the emergency department can be used to monitor trends in morbidity and aid overdose prevention planning efforts. Prevention strategies include distribution of naloxone (a medication that reverses the effects of opioids), enhancing access to treatment, including medication-assisted treatment, and implementing harm reduction services, including comprehensive syringe services programs.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of non-fatal emergency department visits due to opioid overdoses increased from 28.5 (n=1,856) to 45.0 (n=2,977) occurrences per 100,000 population.

Soft Tissue Infections Associated with Drug Abuse

The risk of skin and soft tissue infections might be increased by poor injection site hygiene, syringe reuse, intramuscular or subcutaneous routes of injection, and contaminated drugs. Prevention strategies include preventing initiation of injection drug use, increasing access to substance abuse treatment programs, promoting hygienic injection practices such as access to alcohol swabs, clean needles, syringes, and other injection equipment, and increasing education about and medical access for the treatment of soft tissue infections.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of soft tissue infections associated with drug abuse in Indiana increased from 2.4 (n=153) to 5.1 (n=338) occurrences per 100,000 population.

Deaths from Drug Poisonings – Opioids

Since 1999, a national trend of increasing drug overdose deaths has occurred. Recent rate increases were driven by synthetic opioids, including illicitly manufactured fentanyl and heroin. Prevention strategies include distribution of naloxone (a medication that reverses the effects of opioids), enhancing access to treatment, including medication-assisted treatment, and implementing harm reduction services, including comprehensive syringe services programs.

Data Summary: From 2013 to 2015, the rate of deaths from drug poisonings due to opioids in Indiana increased from 2.6 (n=168) to 4.1 (n=274) deaths per 100,000 population.

Hepatitis C, Acute

The Hepatitis C virus (HCV) is a blood-borne virus primarily transmitted by an HCV-infected person sharing needles, syringes, or other injection equipment. HCV occurs in the first several months after infection and results in illness from very mild or no symptoms to a serious acute HCV infection requiring hospitalization. Many people living with HCV do not have symptoms and do not know they are infected. Chronic HCV infection results when a person is not able to clear the virus after acute infection.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of acute hepatitis C virus infection in Indiana increased from 1.3 (n=84) to 2.1 (n=140) cases per 100,000 population.

Many people living with HCV do not have symptoms and do not know they are infected. Chronic HCV infection results when a person is not able to clear the virus after acute infection.

Newly Diagnosed HIV/AIDS

The human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) is transmitted by an HIV-infected person having unprotected sex or by sharing needles, syringes, and other injection equipment. Sharing injecting equipment is considered high risk for transmitting HIV because the drug materials may have blood in them, which can carry HIV. Use of drugs can reduce inhibitions and increase sexual risk behaviors, which may result in chlamydia, gonorrhea, or other STDs. There is no cure for HIV, but treatment with antiviral therapy greatly extends the life expectancy of people living with HIV.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of newly diagnosed HIV/AIDS infection in Indiana increased slightly from 8.0 (n=518) to 9.4 (n=621) cases per 100,000 population.

HIV/AIDS Prevalence

The human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) is transmitted by an HIV-infected person having unprotected sex or by sharing needles, syringes, and other injection equipment. Sharing injecting equipment is considered high risk for transmitting HIV because the drug materials may have blood in them, which can carry HIV. Use of drugs can reduce inhibitions and increase sexual risk behaviors, which may result in chlamydia, gonorrhea, or other STDs. There is no cure for HIV, but treatment with antiviral therapy greatly extends the life expectancy of people living with HIV.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the number of Hoosiers living with HIV/AIDS increased from 10,225 to 11,698 cases.

Chlamydia

Chlamydia is a common sexually transmitted disease (STD) that is transmitted to both men and women through unprotected anal, vaginal, or oral sex. Most of those infected do not show symptoms. The infection is caused by bacteria that are effectively treated with antibiotics. Untreated chlamydia can increase your chances of getting or giving HIV.

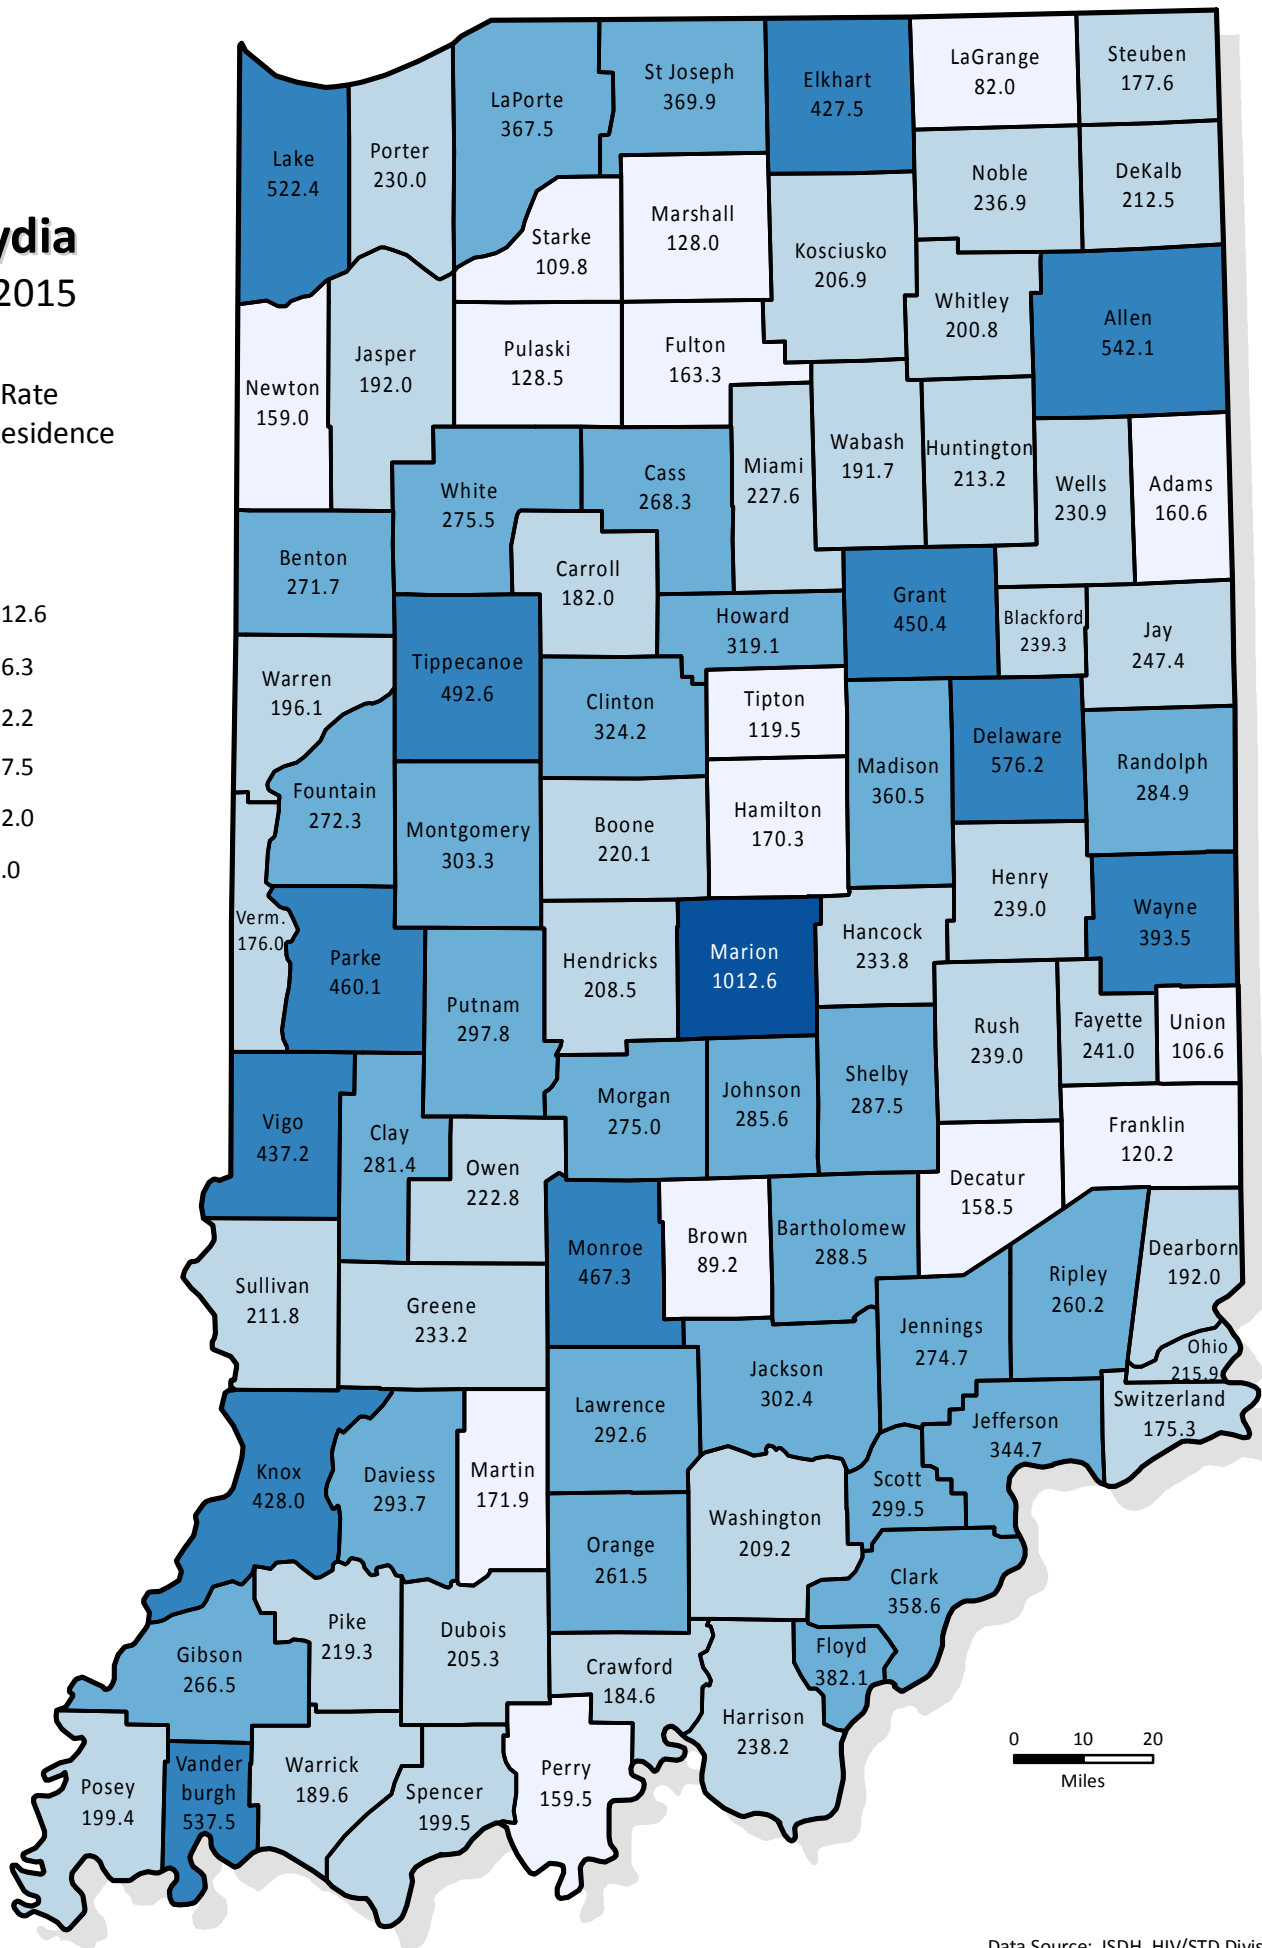

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of chlamydia infection in Indiana remained relatively stable, 426.6 (n=27,802) and 436.4 (n=28,886) cases per 100,000 population, respectively.

Gonorrhea is an STD that is transmitted to both men and women through unprotected anal, vaginal, or oral sex. Many of those infected do not show symptoms. The infection is caused by bacteria that are effectively treated with antibiotics. Untreated gonorrhea can increase your chances of getting or giving HIV.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of gonorrhea infection in Indiana increased slightly from 100.8 (n=6,569) to 118.5 (n=9,545) cases per 100,000 population.

Endocarditis

Endocarditis, which is inflammation of the inner part of the heart, can be caused by bacteria that travel to the heart. One of the ways a person develops endocarditis is by injecting drugs using a needle contaminated with bacteria. Endocarditis might develop slowly over time, but a person can be treated once the infection is identified. The infection can cause tissue damage and make a person more likely to develop endocarditis again.

Data Summary: From 2011 to 2015, the rate of emergency department visits in Indiana due to endocarditis increased slightly from 7.4 (n=484) to 11.7 (n=776) cases per 100,000 population.
